Jesse Boyd Once More Has Chance to Plead Guilty

Jesse Boyd, released on bond pending his appearance at the next term of district court on a charge of breaking and entering the Farmers' Union store some weeks ago, was rearrested Saturday and given the formality of another trial. He entered a plea of guilty and was again released.

During the absence of County Attorney Basye at Rushville last week, Boyd, who had been held in the county jail until his attorneys could locate bondsmen for him, was turned loose. When the county attorney returned, he recalled that Boyd had not been formally arraigned. When first taken to jail, he had entered a plea of guilty, but the complaints against the two men were dismissed in order to permit them to get their liberty on bond, without going to Rushville before Judge Westover. The first cases had been transcribed to district court by the time either of the men had found bondsmen. By withdrawing the old complaints and substituting new ones, the cases were once more under the jurisdiction of the county court. At the time Shepherd was released, Boyd was still in jail, suffering from a bullet wound, and he was never arraigned the second time, but this fact slipped the officials' mind.
